Folding immensities of light.

And the faint decayed patchouli -
Fragrance of New Orleans

Upheld in the warm air
Miraculously whole.

I shall know you, secrets by the litter you have left

Silence builds her wall
about a dream impaled.

excerpted from After Storm

I know your secrets.

Female and male,
Complete, indivisible, one,
Fused into light.

Aren't there bigger things to talk about
Than a window in Greenwich Village
And hyacinths sprouting
Like little puce poems out of a sick soul?

This midnight the moon,
Playing virgin after all her encounters,
Will break another date with you.
